Manual:Extension/Emoticons

Emoticons are converted to small smiley images in the Reading view. BlueSpice has a list of emoticons, or smilies, coming from chat jargon. These can enhance communication by expressing things like irony, for example. If a user adds a smiley to an article, this is transformed into an image.

Contents

How to use emoticons

The following sequences of symbols are transformed into emoticons. Here is the list of BlueSpice smilies where you see the sequence of symbols, then the name of the image, then the image and a short description:

```
:-) smile.png   smiling
:-( sad.png   sad
:-| neutral.png   neutral, sceptical
:-@ angry.png   angry, annoyed
;-) wink.png   winking, ironic
:-D smile-big.png   laughing
:-/ thinking.png   thinking
:-X shut-mouth.png   sealed lips
:'(   crying.png   crying
:-O shock.png   shocked, surprised
:-S confused.png   undecided, confused
8-) laugh.png   laughing
```

:lol: glasses-cool.png cool, sunglasses

```
(:| yawn.png   yawning
:good:good.png   good, thumbs up
:bad: bad.png   bad, thumbs down
:-[ embarrassed.png   embarrassed, blushing
[-X shame.png   ashamed
```

Tips for using emoticons

If a user adds an emoticon to an article, this is transformed into a small image. The emoticons used can be changed at the page Template: emoticons.

> Note: Emoticons cannot be used directly at the start of a line! This could otherwise lead to conflicts with other wiki markup e.g. indents or lists which start with : or ;. One always has to leave a space before an emoticon too.

Related info

* Reference:BlueSpiceEmoticons

This document was created with BlueSpice